The thought of a book like this was initially sown by a request to write a piece on Justice and Mercy in the Old Testament for the Catholic Social Justice Series (No 64). This happened while I was lecturing at The Catholic Institute of Sydney (CIS). I am grateful to the Australian Catholic Social Justice Council for the opportunity to put some ideas down on paper and have them published as A God Merciful and Gracious: Justice and Mercy in the Old Testament (2008). As a result of this I subsequently offered a course on Justice, Mercy and Theodicy in the Hebre Bible/Old Testament [HBOT] when I returned to Melbourne and resumed lecturing at two of the colleges of the MCD University of Divinity, namely Catholic Theological College (CTC) and Yarra Theological Union (YTU). A sabbatical year in Sydney in 2011 provided the opportunity and the time to research the notion of divine righteousness and justice in the HBOT further and to produce a first draft of this book.

The Dominican house in Sydney was full at the time and I am very grateful to Barry Brundell MSC for providing lodgings at the Erskineville presbytery and to the parishioners there for their warm welcome and hospitality during the year. Erskineville had the advantage of being relatively close to Moore College Library, which proved a valuable resource for my research. My thanks to the staff of the library for their assistance. On my return to Melbourne I was able to avail of another excellent research facility and staff at the Dalton McCaughhey Library of the United Faculty of Theology (UFT), another college of the MCD University of Divinity.

I am grateful to my Dominican Province for its support over many years of teaching Bible Studies and for assisting me financially during my sabbatical. The MCD University of Divinity also provided
